Hollywood Hits Chicago

The Celebs are Loving Chi-town

This week, I felt a little like I was walking down Rodeo or filming in the midst of Hollywood, there were so many actresses and actors floating around. And, boy, did they have fun while they were here. My personal favorite sighting of the week would have to go to Pamela Anderson, but there are many more noteworthy sightings.

If you didn't hear, Pam was out and about at the Horseshoe Casino, floating around in barely-there clothing at a Richie Rich fashion show. But that was only the beginning. After her A*Muse Fashion Show, she showed up at Cuvée Ultra Lounge with designer Richie Rich around 1am and was seen dancing and chatting with girlfriends while drinking Perrier-Jouët Champagne until 5 am and partying with Dennis Rodman. I mean.....5 am? I can't stay out nearly that late and I am half her age.....that's intense.

Then a younger couple also got their party on - cutie Taylor Swift was seen partying and dancing with her (unofficial) boyfriend, Taylor Lautner, at Le Passage until the wee hours. But don't worry - no dirty stuff - Swift's mom was with them the whole time.

Uma Thurman was out and about Thursday night grabbing a bite at Le Colonial after she walked the red carpet at the Chicago International Film Festival. The actress was with her publicist - they hydrated with Fiji water and ate some tuna tartare, duck rolls and some other signature dishes. But she didn't eat too much - the star told a source she was on "portion control," which is why she says she didn't eat all of her Bo Sate and Chicken Curry dish. Although she had to keep leaving the table for a number of reasons: restroom, smoking (at least twice) and phone calls, she was a good tipper and very humorous, according to a source.
